A Message From Yasmin Beers

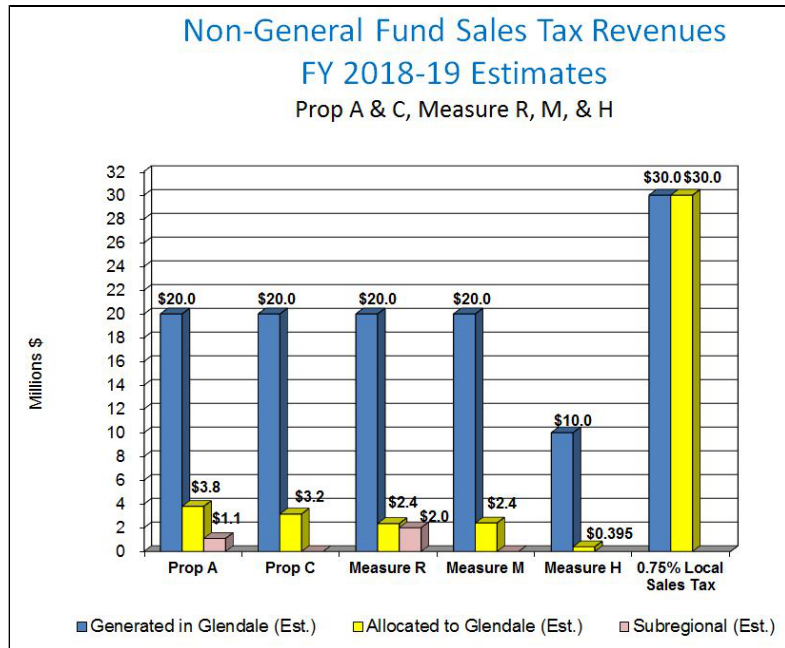

Glendale City Manager

The City of Glendale provides unmatched services to its residents and businesses – from public safety to recreation and parks, libraries, arts and culture, and quality of life programs – to help our community thrive. But by no means are we perfect or without challenges. Honestly, I can't think of a city that isn't dealing with many of the same issues as we are.

One of our challenges is ensuring that revenue generated in Glendale stays local and is used to provide services for the benefit of Glendale residents and businesses. To confront this challenge and ensure that $30 million in new revenue will only be used locally, the Glendale City Council unanimously placed the 'Glendale Quality of Life and Essential Services Protection Measure' on the November 6th ballot.

Our neighbors to the east and west have arrived at the same conclusion – Pasadena and Burbank placed almost identical measures on their local ballots for November 2018, and voters in other cities have also recently approved similar ballot measures that changed the local sales tax.

Glendale Quality of Life and Essential Services Protection Measure

On November 6, 2018, Glendale neighborhoods will have a choice.

The Glendale Quality of Life and Essential Services Protection Measure will ensure that an estimated $30 million of new funding generated will be used locally. The County, regional agencies, or special districts won't be able to take this funding in the future.

If this measure does not pass in November, it's likely that any future sales tax adopted by the County, regional agencies, and special districts would be assessed on Glendale, and Glendale would only receive a small portion to improve our local neighborhoods.

This fiscal year, Glendale is expected to send $90 million to the County in special sales taxes, but only receive $15 million in return. For example, Glendale is projected to generate $10 million because of Measure H, which is a 0.25% sales tax increase approved by county voters in 2017 to support homeless services. Glendale is estimated to receive only $395,000 in Measure H funding for FY 18-19.

If voters do not approve this measure, a sales tax increase of 0.75%, which is expected to raise about $30 million annually for the City of Glendale, other jurisdictions like the County or a regional agency will be authorized to approve a sales tax, and those funds will not be solely retained in Glendale. Unlike a possible County or regional agency tax, 100% of this $30 million stays in Glendale.

Other area cities see this challenge and are acting as well. Pasadena has placed the 'Pasadena Infrastructure/Community Essential Services Protection Measure' on the November ballot. Burbank has placed the 'Burbank Infrastructure and Community Services Protection Act' on the ballot.

It is a fact that many cities in our region generate and send millions of dollars in special sales taxes to the County, regional agencies, and special districts, but don't see a commensurate amount in return. This fiscal year, Glendale is expected to send $90 million to the County in special sales taxes, but only receive $15 million to use locally.

For example, Glendale is projected to generate $10 million because of Measure H, which is a 0.25% sales tax increase approved by county voters in 2017 to support homeless services. How much of that do we get in return for FY 18-19 to help those in need here in Glendale? Only $395,000. By increasing our sales tax to the County cap of 10.25% (from 9.5%) today, the funds generated would stay local and not be diverted by similar County and regional tax measures.

I am not saying that the sky is falling – historically, Glendale is a fiscally conservative City with a balanced budget and strong reserves. However, this measure will ensure that an estimated $30 million of new funding generated will be used in Glendale for Glendale programs and services. With this amount of additional revenue to the General Fund, your City Council will be well-positioned to protect funding for investment in deferred infrastructure, affordable housing, public safety, and other essential services.

With all of the cost saving measures our City Council has taken over the past five years, including the elimination of 337 full time positions, reducing spending without significantly impacting service levels is no longer a realistic option.

It is important to understand that if voters approve this local sales tax, our City will have full control over its generated revenues. If it is not adopted, it's likely that future sales taxes adopted by the County, regional agencies, and special districts would be assessed on Glendale, and Glendale will only receive a small portion of that to improve our local neighborhoods.

By increasing the sales taxes to the County cap of 10.25% today, the City would prevent future sales tax increases generating revenue inside the City to be used mostly outside the City.

The current sales tax in Glendale is 9.5%, which is split by the state, the County of Los Angeles, and the City, which receives 1%. Of the County special taxes, a majority is for transportation projects and the remainder is for homeless services.

Today, as Glendale's infrastructure ages and the need for affordable housing continues to grow, reducing spending without significantly impacting service levels is no longer a realistic option.

With the possibility of regional government agencies taxing Glendale to its sales tax maximum of 10.25%, Glendale must consider how it will protect funding for infrastructure, affordable housing, and essential services.

EMERGENCY

With heat, holidays, and lots of time spent outside – summer is prime time for emergencies. It is our duty, as the City of Glendale, to provide an efficient and coordinated response to any disaster that could threaten the well-being and health of our residents and visitors. Thankfully, Glendale combines proactive measures with a flexible and effective Emergency Operations Plan to save lives, communicate, and prevent the destruction of property. However, in a major disaster, resources will be spread thin, leading to potential delays in delivering help. Fortunately, there are many ways citizens can equip and educate themselves ahead of time.

Mondays in August – Back Alley Painters, 10:30 am – 1:30

Every year late in the spring and early summer, West Nile Virus (WNV) reappears. WNV is spread largely through mosquito contact with humans, but also through diseased birds and other means. While for most people contracting WNV is harmless, it can in some cases cause severe illness or even death. That's why it's important to keep informed about how to protect yourself from WNV.

The Greater Los Angeles County Vector Control District (GLACVCD) tracks confirmed samples and cases of WNV in Los Angeles County, and the first case of the year occurred in Long Beach in mid-June. To protect yourself and help prevent transmission of WNV and other mosquito-borne illnesses, follow these tips:

- Check for and eliminate standing water on your property weekly, and report standing water you see in other locations.
- Avoid outdoor activities at dusk and dawn when mosquitoes are most active.
- Wear long pants and long sleeves when outside as much as possible.
- Use insect repellents with EPA-certified repellents, including DEET, oil of lemon eucalyptus, Picaridin, or IR3535.
- Be aware of the potential for other mosquito-borne illnesses when traveling.
- Check all windows and screens in your home to make sure they properly seal.

If you find a significant mosquito breeding place or presence, or have further questions about mosquitoes in L.A. County, WNV, and how to protect yourself, please contact the GLACVCD at 562-944-9656, or visit them online here. You can also learn more about the virus from the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) at <https://www.cdc.gov/westnile/>.
