Yasmin BeersGlendale City Manager*

The job of local governments is multifaceted and varies from city to city. From parks and recreation services to police and fire departments, housing and emergency medical services to public works, local governments provide many essential public services across multiple Departments. In Glendale, all these Departments work together to achieve one main goal: a community that is safe, prosperous, and rich in cultural offerings. There is no one way to do it – but in Glendale, it means collaboration between Departments, a combination of people and skills, and community support.

To give you a piece of how Glendale operates, let's look at some of the functions:

Community Services & Parks (CSP) is responsible for 286 acres of park land and over 5,000 acres of open space. We have 47 parks and community centers, and historic sites. CSP is also responsible for youth recreation programs, a youth employment program employing over 400 youth per year, senior recreation programs including nutritional meals, youth and adult sports programs, an aquatics program,

Spooktacular Safety Tips

HALLOWEEN SAFETY TIPS

Halloween is only a few weeks away! Hopefully your plans are set and costumes ready for the big day. Whether you are out trick-or-treating, or planning a spooky night on the town, the City of Glendale has the following safety tips to keep you safe on Halloween:

- Candles are a perfect addition to anyone's haunted house, but be careful! According to the National Fire Protection Association, Halloween blazes caused over $13.4 million in direct property damage between 2009-2013.
- Avoid billowing or long-trailing fabric on costumes. Costume material may easily ignite upon contact with heat or flame.
- Give children flashlights and/or glow sticks while they are trick-or-treating. If your child is wearing a mask, make sure their eyeholes are large enough so they can see clearly.
- Keep flammable decorations away from heat sources. Dried flowers,

How do you become the 4th safest City in California and 6th in the Nation for a population our size? The Glendale Police Department provides first class 9-1-1 emergency response, proactive law enforcement, crime investigation and case preparation, community and school policing, and administration of the City jail facility.

Public Works is comprised of Administration, Fleet Services, Integrated Waste Management, Maintenance Services, Facilities Management, and Engineering. All work to maintain the City's infrastructure including streets, sewers, storm drains, debris basins, signs, traffic signals, playground facilities, sports field structures, parking lots, and maintenance to the various public buildings and sites owned by the City.

The path to excellent operational outcomes is cross-departmental collaboration – but most of all, we would not be able to keep Glendale safe, clean, or flourishing without the residents and business owners who care about what happens on their street. This is our community. Let's continue to work together to preserve its charm.

Have a safe and happy Halloween!

cornstalks, and crepe paper are highly flammable and should be kept away from open flames and other heat sources, including light bulbs and heaters.

- Use glow sticks or battery-operated candles in jack-o-lanterns. They are much safer, and create a scary look that lasts longer. However, if you do decide to use a candle, use extreme caution. Light the candle with a long fireplace-style match or a utility lighter.
- Trick-or-treat in a group. Make sure at least one responsible adult is present and has a fully charged cell-phone.
- Look left or right and check for traffic before crossing streets. Halloween is a busy time and roadways will be full of costumed pedestrians.
- Be a vigilant driver throughout this busy night. Drive extra carefully in residential areas by eliminating interior distractions and being cognizant of your surroundings.
- Check your candy before you dig in! Throw out any suspicious or opened candy. Only accept homemade candy or treats from friends, family, and neighbors who you trust.
- Designate a driver. If you are a bit too old for trick-or-treating and want to celebrate be sure to have a designated driver. Calling for a taxi or ridesharing service is far cheaper than being arrested for drunken driving.

In a typical home fire, you may have as little as one to two minutes to escape safely from the time you hear the smoke alarm. Knowing how to use that time wisely takes planning and practice.

The theme of this year's Fire Prevention Week, "Look. Listen. Learn.", encourages residents to learn about basic but essential ways to quickly and safely escape from a home fire, and highlights three steps Glendale residents can take.

Look for places fire could start and address the problem: Keep paper, cardboard, and fabric away from the stovetop. Replace electrical cables that have worn out insulation.

Listen for the sound of the smoke alarm: Test your smoke detectors regularly and familiarize yourself with the different sounds the smoke detectors in your house make; when there is a fire and when the detector needs replacing.

Learn two ways out of every room: Determine the two safest and quickest ways for your family to escape your home in an emergency. Walk the routes out and remove any obstacles that could hamper your family's exit. Make a map of your house, your two exits, and a safe meeting place. Add this map to your family emergency plan.

Being aware of your surroundings is a skill people need to use in their home and wherever they go. No matter where you are, be alert for dangerous conditions, look for available exits, and if the alarm system sounds, take it seriously and exit the building immediately.

Assembly Bill 162 (Statute of 2009) and Senate Bill 1305 (Statutes of 1997) require utilities to disclose information to consumers about the energy resources used to generate the electricity sold in the form of a Power Content Label created by the California Energy Commission. This label provides customers with reliable information about the electricity sources, enabling customers to easily compare the power content of one electric service product with that of others. The power content label is similar to a "nutrition label" for electricity.

It's All About the Deuk

If you've never been to Deukmejian Wilderness Park, call a friend, plan a hike, and go enjoy the breathtaking views. Deukmejian Wilderness Park is the City's 709-acre natural park in the northernmost portion of Glendale. The park includes the Park Center, a 12-acre area at the south end of the park and the site of the Le Mesnager Barn. Built between 1914 and 1918, the historical Barn is a relatively rare example of a two-story vernacular rock structure. The Barn is also associated with the early development of the wine industry in Southern California, and unusual, arched roof trusses.

On December 5, 2017, the Glendale City Council approved a Motion adopting a Master Plan for the Deukmejian Park Nature Education Center Project and directed staff to proceed with completion of the design. The contract for the design development and construction was approved earlier this year. The final part of this project will complete the adaptive re-use of the Barn as a nature education center and community building. While the Barn will primarily function as a nature center, displays, exhibits, and other furnishings will be designed to be easily moved to use this space as a community room, lecture hall, or reception area for weddings, art exhibitions, and other gatherings. The project will also include a new restroom building near the Barn, as well as Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA) improvements.

Among the many disasters that could befall a city of Glendale's size and geographic location are major fires, earthquakes, flooding, and mudslides. The City of Glendale is committed to providing emergency services should disasters such as these arise, and is currently updating the City's Local Hazard Mitigation Plan (LHMP) to proactively facilitate and support community-wide policies, practices, and programs that make Glendale better prepared in the event of a disaster.
